THE wholesale price of coal, the Yiji says, continues to advance in Japan, the sales effected in foreign markets having been large. It is reported that the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha and the Hokkaido Coal Mining and Railway Company have had to refuse orders owing to low stocks. Many colliery owners, moreover, are unable to avail themselves of the present brisk demand owing to the lack of miners. Several abandoned mines in Kishu have been reopened, owing to the favourable condition of the market, and the extra demand for laborers has led to a scarcity of men trained to the work, while wages have risen very considerably.

We note that the steamer Nankin (late Kuangsue), built at Whampoa by Amoy as a gunboat for the Canton Government, is undergoing considerable alterations in both the deck and engine-room departments at the works of Geo. Fenwick & Co., Ltd., Wanchai. She is being fitted with a new set of triple-expansion engines, cylinders 13" by 21" by 33" and 21" stroke; a horizontal condenser in course of construction, and the general accommodation is being greatly extended. When the alterations are going on are completed, the Nankin will be a first-class steamer, and will be able to take a full cargo of passengers and cargo, and will be a most useful addition to the fleet.

THE old artist who contributes "Notes from the South" to the N. C. Daily News has made what he describes in his head line as "An Unpleasant Discovery." Here it is in his own language:—"Sharks are not often seen in our waters, though at long intervals, and during the first advent of the south-west monsoon, they have been seen in the harbour. One of these marine monsters was captured by a fisherman, near Stanley, the other day, by some Chinese fishermen, and when he was opened two guppies and some human remains were found in the stomach. It cannot be doubted that in some way or other two Chinamen must have provided meals for this voracious creature, though how they came in its way is more difficult to determine. Probably they were drowned from some wreck, which may have occurred at a considerable distance off the coast. He calls it a 'monster' because the China Mail said it was a shark, nearly six feet long!"

As a matter of fact the "two guppies" were pieces of rope which had been swallowed by the fisherman, and the shark was by no means a rarity, as they can be seen any day about Lamau and the adjoining islands, though they seldom come close to shore. This yarn reminds one of the hen that was out worm-hunting, and struck a rather tough-looking specimen which, when half-swallowed, turned out to be a shoe-ace, with the shoe on the other end of it. What would you do in such a case, Sketchy? Give it up? That is just what the hen had to do!

FOR the benefit of those carrying critics who do not like free translations such as we usually give, here is a specimen verbatim from a Manila contemporary:—"To the amiability of a friend which forms part of the forces expeditious at Mindanao, we owe the following notice, which we put pressure on ourselves to communicate to the press:—The forces which sailed from Manila and Cavite the 21st inst. were a regiment for Mindanao, arrived at Iligan with felicity and after a handsome voyage, on the 23rd of the regiment of the line No. 74, and on the 24th the forces which remained in Manila from the No. 73 and from the Peninsular regiment of Artillery, being perfectly installed all the troops. On the 25th by the evening came to the barracks the commandant Don Nicolas Sorio, at the front of a column of 600 men, composed of one section of engineers, another of artillery, one company of the Disciplinary Battalion and others of the regiment of line No. 73 and occupying a post in the column came the official Señor Lopez Pozas, recently wounded in the advance on Calabanan, these forces form part of those which in these last days have sustained combats with the Moros. The column was received by the Señor Colonel Novella, accompanied by all the officials existing in the place and by the presidency of the town, and defiled before the artillery formed in line. Once in the place of the town and collected all the force of artillery formed in line and the recently arrived column by companies, the sergeant Colonel Novella, with intonation clear and vigorous, harangued the troops felicitating them for the triumphs obtained and hoping that with the reinforcements arrived there would be presented at the earliest occasion to add new stamps to our glorious banner, terminating with 'Vivas' to: pain, to the King, to the Army, and to our illustrious Captain General, which were enthusiastically contested. The notice facilitated by the commandant Sr. Sorio cannot be more satisfactory, as if that is immeasurable the application which refers to our troops.—It is as much notice up to now that we can facilitate to our readers. How's that for a translation?"

LIEUTENANT Young of the U. S. S. Boston, in his testimony before the U. S. Senate Hawaiian Investigating Committee, stated that on one occasion when he entered the reception-room to pay his respects to the Queen, in his official capacity, that lady was drunk.

A LARGE mass of correspondence referring to the outbreak of pleuro-pneumonia at the Pok-fu-lum Dairy Farm came before the Sanitary Board to-day. The Colonial Veterinary Surgeon had sent in a series of reports, and finally the Dairy Farm Company undertook to carry out every precaution suggested—most of the usual steps in the way of isolation, &c., having been taken from the first. The district was not declared an infected area, nor were any animals ordered to be killed. The Company had, however, killed and buried all the diseased animals, and the outbreak was now apparently at an end. Our information, which is up to date, tends to show that the disease is far from being at an end, and that diseased cattle are being buried almost every day.

THE Shantung correspondent of the N. C. Daily News writes from Weichen on March 22nd as follows:—"It may be of interest to some of your readers to note that, according to the report of the recent Shantung Missionary Conference, now in course of publication, there are ten Protestant missionary bodies at work in this province, which report an aggregate of 8,350 native church members for the year 1893. At present there are 169 foreigners, men and women, connected with the mission, and it can hardly be argued that all of these eight thousand and more converts are 'vice Christians,' especially when we consider that a large number of mission ai-changs are not converts. At ten missionary dispensaries located at Chefoo, Weichen, Ichoufu, Chingchow, Tsouping, Chingfu, Panghuang, Linchingchow, and Weihsaiwei, 88,357 Chinese patients were treated. The number of stations outside of Chefoo where missionaries reside is thirteen."

SUPREME COURT.

IN SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

(Before Mr. A. G. Wils, Acting Puisne Judge.) April 10th.

THE ETERNAL DRAGON PROCESSION.

Shung Ki and others, numbering 32 in all, members of the Rattan-gold Guild, sued the Shun Wo shop for the recovery of $14 paid for work which turned out unsatisfactory, and Chan Han Shan, one of the 32, sued Li Shing, manager of the Shun Wo shop, for $300 in damages for wrongful imprisonment resulting from a fight over the same matter. The cases were taken separately. Mr. H. L. Denny appeared for the plaintiffs, and the defendants conducted their own cases throughout.

The evidence showed that the leading rattan shops in the Colony subscribed for a pair of red lanterns to be carried in the great dragon procession of the Man Mo temple at the end of February, and afterwards to be presented to a distinguished "joss" in the rattan business, whose temple was somewhere in Kwangtung province, Nambol district. There were 32 subscribers—the present plaintiffs—and they paid the defendants $14, on the understanding (as they claimed) that the banners were to be of chou-so or pure silk. The banners were supplied, carried about Hongkong amid the hideous gong-thumping that caused so much unpleasantness at the time; and at last they reached Nambol. On arrival, however, the "joss" discovered that the banners were of spurious material, and to show his displeasure he refused to accept them, completely ruining their beauty and revealing their worthlessness. The plaintiffs in holy horror returned the banners to the rattan guild, with a forcible expression of opinion in the case. The 32 subscribers at once rushed at their pursues-committee for trading off cheap imitations on the "joss." The committee in turn went for the shop-keeper who sold the trash and they were at once met with the retort that they had selected the identical banner for themselves from among the stock, without saying a word as to quality; they had simply chosen what they wanted, a plain banner of min-chau or cotton-silk, which was not supposed to be anything better. The purchasers denied having selected the goods; they had ordered silk banners to be built according to specification. This was a plain question of hard swearing, buyer versus seller.

The other case arose out of the same matter. The purchasing-committee of the rattan-gold guild, on having the fraudulent counterfeit thrown back on their hands by the "joss" and his priests, went to the rattan factory to give vent to their feelings. The result was that, to save the premises from total wreck, Li Shing (the manager) called the police and had the indignation meeting dispersed and some of the looted up in the cells. The knights of the rattan now claimed $300 damages for having the fun stopped by this incarceration, which they characterised as wrongful and malicious. (Case proceeding.)

JUDICIAL VENDETTA.

The suit for $1000 as damages for unlawful imprisonment in the Y-mat partnership dispute, commenced yesterday before the acting Puisne Judge, was adjourned until to-morrow.

The suit for $500 as damages for unlawful imprisonment in the Duteros sugar-stealing dispute, commenced on Tuesday before the acting Chief Justice and a jury, was continued to-day for about an hour and was then adjourned until to-morrow.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Legislative Council was held this afternoon. There were present:—Mr. G. T. M. O'Brien (Colonial Secretary and Acting Governor); Mr. W. M. Goodman (Attorney General); Mr. J. H. Stewart Lockhart (Registrar-General); Mr. R. M. Ramsey (Harbour Master); Mr. E. Bowdler (Acting Director of Public Works); Mr. N. J. Mitchell-Jones (Colonial Treasurer); Messrs. C. P. Chater, T. H. Whitehead, J. J. Kenwick, E. R. Bellillo, and Ho Kai, unofficial members.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

REPORT. The Colonial Secretary laid on the table the Harbour Master's report for 1893.

PROTECTION OF WOMEN AND GIRLS. The Registrar General moved that Part 2 of the Women and Girls' Protection Ordinance of 1890, enacted for a period which is now about expiring, be re-enacted until further notice.

Mr. Whitehead, while not objecting to the principle at all, called attention to the fact that the operation of the Ordinance in question was limited to "a period or periods to be fixed by the Council," and "until further notice" was not a fixed period.

After a good deal of discussion, the Attorney General, when closely pressed by the Acting Governor, was unable to give a decided legal opinion as to whether "until further notice" could legally be called a "fixed period," and consequently the motion was amended, limiting the period to five years, and in this form the motion was carried.

OPIUM-SMUGGLING ON RIVER STEAMERS.

The Attorney General moved the first reading of the bill entitled "An Ordinance to amend the Opium Ordinance of 1891." He would not say much, as the reasons were stated at the foot of the draft bill circulated to members, and could be fully discussed on the motion for second reading. The bill simply amended sec. 38 and sec. 39 of the Ordinance so as to "absolutely prohibit any person from taking opium on a boat bound to Canton or Macao without duly declaring it on the manifest. The substituted sections will, it is believed, afford reasonable additional protection to ships bound for or about to proceed to Canton or Macao, or for involving any hardship upon the Opium Farmer, for where he can show that he was no party to the improper shipment of opium, he can apply to have the forfeited opium delivered to him."

The Registrar General seconded the motion to read the bill for the first time.

The Acting Governor:—The question is that the Bill be—

Mr. Chater:—Sir, before I vote for the first reading of this Bill I should like to know from the hon. and learned Attorney-General whether he has consulted the Opium Farmer on this subject and got his consent to the amendment now proposed, varying the contract with him. Some two days ago, when I got these papers, I looked over the proposed amendment very carefully, and more particularly over the reasons given at the bottom of the page; and it appeared to me very clear that in the view of the Attorney-General the Opium Farmer was not to be consulted at all. No doubt, as the legal authority of the Government, he has informed you that it is perfectly competent for the Council to do what is now proposed; but taking a common-sense view of the matter, a mercantile view, I may say, if we were to pass this amendment we would be doing wrong. In all mercantile transactions, where there are two parties to a contract, such contract cannot be altered in any shape or form without the written consent of both parties. Now, there is a contract between the Government and the Opium Farmer, but it does not suit one of the parties, namely the Government, that certain conditions of the contract should continue, and to an alteration is proposed; but as far as I can make out from the statement of reasons at the foot of the draft bill, and from the very few words uttered by the Attorney-General, the consent of the Opium Farmer has not been obtained. That being the case I am certainly of opinion that the Government lays itself open to an action for damages if these amendments are passed. Therefore I am not prepared to give my assent to the first reading until I am assured that there is absolutely no doubt that we shall not be exposed to a civil action in the law-court for damages."

Mr. Whitehead:—Sir, I rise to support what has been said by the Senior Unofficial Member. Just before the Council Chamber I was requested by the Opium Farmer to move at a subsequent part of this meeting that the Council should allow the Opium Farmer to be heard by counsel on the second reading of the Bill. The Opium Farmer has grave objections to the proposed amendments, and with your Excellency's permission I will move later on that the Standing Orders be suspended, in order to move that the Opium Farmer be heard by his counsel on the second reading.

The Acting Governor:—You give notice of motion to that effect now?

Mr. Whitehead:—I would like to move it to-day.

The Acting Governor stated that since the commencement of the sitting he had received a letter from the Opium Farmer through his solicitor, Mr. H. L. Denny, stating his intention to take the usual steps to apply for permission to be heard by counsel at the second reading, under the standing rules and orders. There was first, however, a question whether the bill was one "affecting private interests."

Mr. Chater pressed for a reply to his remarks as to the legality of the proposed amendment. After a little discussion the Acting Governor laid it down that "the Legislative Council of Hongkong has a perfect legal right to do anything it likes in Hongkong jurisdiction;" as to whether an action for damages might succeed in this case, that could not be answered off-hand.

But there was no help for it anyhow, as he would explain later on, the bill must pass.

Mr. Chater:—That is what I contend—it will lay us open to an action for damages, and I say that should be all means be avoided.

Dr. Ho Kai said that whatever reasons the Government might have, as noted by Mr. O'Brien—possibly orders from the Secretary of State—will the Officials' duty was to oppose injustice, and to avoid needless expense.

The Acting Governor reminded the Council that it was never the rule to say much about a bill on first reading.

Dr. Ho Kai:—No, but when a Bill bears on the face of it the elements of what is plainly wrong, then we must oppose it at once. We are quite entitled to demand an explanation, especially if, as I hear, the second reading is to be hurried on in a very few days.

After a little further discussion, the Acting Governor proceeded to put the question.

Mr. Chater:—Your Excellency—

The Acting Governor:—I have put the question: it is too late to reply now.

Mr. Chater:—I don't want to reply, but with respect to voting, I should like to know whether the second reading will come on immediately or not, because if it does I must oppose the motion, while if you allow a fortnight or so for the Opium Farmer to consider his position, I shall probably vote with you for the first reading—but not otherwise.

After a little private consultation the Acting Governor announced that the second reading could not be delayed longer than four days.

SHAOHSING.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Shaohsing, March 29th 1894.

I wrote you in October last of a case of attempted bribery on the part of an ex-Tsai named (Chow Ching), and told you that he was seized and conveyed to Hangchow, the capital of Chekiang province. He has been under arrest ever since, and now we hear that recent orders have been received from Peking, stating that sentence of death has been passed upon him, and that he must suffer the extreme penalty of the law. All helps to commit suicide have been removed from his cell; and although this Han-lin graduate and ex-Tsai is allowed his daily portion of opium, and his page, or man-in-waiting, permitted to minister to him, yet the opium is now exactly measured or weighed, and the page's life is to go for the master's if there be treachery or any under-hand work discovered. The queue also of this mandarin is—as is the custom in such cases—divested of the strong silk thread with which the Chinese plait their tails, and the hair—which in this case is neither long nor plentiful—is tied up in a knot, and firmly secured by strong sealing-wax to the top of the head, in order to prevent any attempt at strangling himself! What a strange figure this ex-Tsai must cut in his condemned cell! All the others implicated—The Provincial Examiner Yin, and who was a Vice-President of one of the Metropolitan Boards, has succeeded in completely establishing his innocence in the case; and also the five wealthy and influential families who were charged with paying to Chow twelve thousand dollars for obtaining the degree of Kiu-jen, or provincial graduate, for one son in each of the above five families, have all got off "scot free," so far as incarceration in the provincial prison is concerned. But doubtless they have had to pay an immense sum of money between them in order to save their heads and their families. All this, of course, is kept very quiet, as the crime is counted as one of treason, the degree of Kiu-jen being inseparably connected with official rank and influence. To us barbarians from the West, the penalty seems too severe; but then literary titles carry no political or civil authority with them; whereas in China, a man with the provincial graduate's title is a power for evil, if he is so disposed; and in general they are the tyrannical pests of the locality in which they reside. Most district magistrates, if they have not a literary title higher than this, are in fear of these petite noblesse, who, "when the play is worth the candle," can turn the scale of justice for or against you. The will of these local autocrats is generally the end to all controversy; and these gentry so outrageously abuse their power that, under the present régime, or mode of government, the people will not be sorry for the fall of the gentry class in their efforts to get this much coveted degree of Kiu-jen. Under the present corrupt administration, the fewer provincial graduates there are the better. It is true that, in the immediate locality or neighbourhood of the successful candidate for this degree, the people feel proud to have such a scholar among them; but, after the first stage of excitement is past, and the usual flag-staffs—the emblems of a Kiu-jen—begin to look dirty and show signs of decay, and after a short exhibition of a few of the mean characteristics of the man, and the monstrous pretensions of his new position, most of his neighbours would be anywhere but near him; for this class of gentry bring no moral force into the neighbourhood with them, none of that healthy power of great and good purposes; but they are simply dignified with those elements which constitute "a local petty tyrant," not necessarily "a clown suddenly risen to power," but a clever, cunning, yet overbearing despot, whose motto is "Private interests and public fame." The evil such men do live after them, and we don't believe that any good is inherited with their bones; and the state in which they leave their neighbourhood and families at death reveals also that they have "left no good behind them." Hence, living or dead, they are undesirable companions!—Shanghai Mercury.

SIAM NOTES.

Bangkok, April 3rd, 1894.
The Scottish Oriental Co.'s steamship Tachibana, Capt. Deans, brought $100,000 yesterday for the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank.
The electric tram will commence running as far as the City gates in four days more. The delay is due to the station not being completed yet. A short trial trip was made at 10 p.m. on Saturday night, with highly satisfactory results.
It is currently reported that the British barque Nicoya, Capt. Norris, has been wrecked on Lighthouse Reef, whilst on a voyage from Saigon to Noumea with a cargo of rice. No lives were lost. The Nicoya, it will be remembered, made several trips between here and Hongkong some two years ago.

There is some curious news from Chantaboon, but as yet we have been unable to verify it. What it beyond doubt, however, is that the French are very much on the qui vive against attacks, and exercise the strictest surveillance, the local steamers being ostentatiously covered by the guns of the war-ship as they go in and out.
On Sunday morning, about 10.30, an electric tram-car at Ban Tawal caused the death of the infant child of one of the Company's employees. The little thing was left playing about the roadside by its mother, whilst the latter, as usual, sat in the house, and just as the car passed it tumbled on to the line. The "cow-catcher," although only a few inches high, passed over it, and although the break was instantly applied the first wheel crushed its body sufficiently to cause instantaneous death, although no external injury was visible. This is the second fatality of the kind on the electric line in some fifteen months, the sufferers in each case being children. A while back a boy was knocked down, but as he tumbled into the netting of the guard he sustained no injury. On several occasions dogs, pigs, and once even a cow, have been saved from being run over in the same way.

The Rachakitcha (Government Gazette) of March 31st, contains a proclamation issued, on the order of the King, by Prince Sommat, acting Keeper of the Royal Seal. It is dated March 22nd, and directed to the Laos inhabitants of the left bank of the Mekong, and states that in the olden days, through wars, rebellions, or the Chien Haws making descents on the region, many people from the left bank of the Mekong used to come over to the right bank, and the latter desire to go back to the left bank (their former residence), as that bank is now under French protection according to the new Treaty, they must be allowed to go. If any such persons, under French protection, are kept in defiance of the Royal will, or cannot return to the Mekong because of any cause or impediment, the Siamese Government will, on learning of such cases, undertake to send the people to the French Minister at Bangkok, or, if the cases are found near the Mekong, the authorities there will be ordered to send the people across the river. From this date should anyone in Siam holding slaves or detaining persons from the said left bank, be it known to them that these people are under French protection, and they are to immediately inform the authorities, who have received orders to release the slaves at once, and report the cases to the Government. From the date of the promulgation two months grace will be given, to allow time to such slaveholders to send them to the authorities or to the Government, after which time, should any of these people be found in the possession of any person or persons, the latter shall be judged by the Court, and condemned to heavy penalties, according to Clause 14 of the Royal Criminal law.—Observer.

April 3rd.
The steamship Woonung, which arrived on Saturday, brought 900 coolies for Bangkok. The Anglo-Siamese Trading Association opened yesterday at their premises near the Oriental Avenue.

It is rumored that a new British Minister has been selected to succeed Captain Jones as Minister-Resident to the Court of Siam.

On Sunday morning No. 3 electric car ran over a little girl, daughter of one of the Tramway clerks. The wheel of the car passed over the child's body, killing her on the spot.

The Hueba brought relief to H.M.S. Linnat on Friday. Dr. Keimel is replaced by Surgeon McShane, and Lieut. Rodgers will succeed Lieut. O'Connell. John H.M.S. Rattler as navigating officer. Two stokers and a marine also arrived by the same mail.

There is no suggestion in the Convention that the Mixed Court will sit at Bangkok any more than at Saigon. The Convention mentions a Mixed Court without any reference whatever as to where it may sit. The convenience of both sides would, however, suggest Bangkok.

Three experienced miners—Captain James and Messrs. Easton and Richards—arrived by the Hueba on Friday. They are engaged for work on the Kaba mines, and will proceed immediately up-country, where Mr. Clarke has everything in readiness for the party to begin operations.

An Indian living in Windmill Road secured his wife's hands with rags soaked in kerosene oil, a few days ago, and afterwards applied a lighted match to the rags. Withdrawing in pain the unfortunate woman appealed to the neighbours for assistance, and the burning material was taken off her hands. It has now transpired that the hard-hearted individual is a confirmed opium eater, and that the demon of opium takes possession of him and leads him astray at times.—Free Press.

MARITIME LAW.

PERRY v. S. S. "PORT ADELAIDE."

The following interesting judgment was delivered on December 12th by Mr. Justice Benedict in the United States District Court of New York—
"Lilliant chartered the whole of a ship, and loaded her for a voyage from New York to Aden, Amoy, Shanghai and Yokohama. The shipowner chartered and manned the vessel. At Shanghai, the ship loaded cotton on her own hook, most of her neighbours would be anywhere but near him; for this class of gentry bring no moral force into the neighbourhood with them, none of that healthy power of great and good purposes; but they are simply dignified with those elements which constitute "a local petty tyrant," not necessarily "a clown suddenly risen to power," but a clever, cunning, yet overbearing despot, whose motto is "Private interests and public fame." The evil such men do live after them, and we don't believe that any good is inherited with their bones; and the state in which they leave their neighbourhood and families at death reveals also that they have "left no good behind them." Hence, living or dead, they are undesirable companions!—Shanghai Mercury.

Forster and Thompson, for Lilliant. Convers and Kirlin, for claimant. Benedict, J.
The steamship Port Adelaide was chartered by the Lilliant for a voyage from New York to Aden, Amoy, Shanghai and Yokohama. By the terms of the charter party "the whole of said vessel with the exception of the necessary room for the crew and storage of provisions, coals, sails and other stores was chartered to the Lilliant, and the charter party also contained the following clause: "Charterers to have the full reach of vessel's holds, spare bunkers, cabins, &c., the same as if the steamer was loading for owner's benefit." The shipowner offered and manned the vessel and were to receive "for the use of said vessel during the voyage aforesaid the sum of $4,500." Bills of Lading were to be signed by the master, and any difference between the charter money and the freight named in the bills of lading was to be settled before the vessel's departure from New York.

Under this contract the charterers furnished the steamer a full cargo from New York, and the freight named in the bills of lading, being less than the $4,500, named in the charter party by the sum of $5,500.47, the difference was paid by the Lilliant to the ship's agent before the ship's departure from New York. None of this cargo was shipped by the Lilliant, but by other shippers loaded by him. It was to be delivered at the ports of Aden, Amoy, Shanghai and Yokohama respectively as per the bills of lading signed by the master, the greater portion of the cargo being deliverable at Aden, Amoy and Shanghai. The steamer proceeded to those ports, and there duly delivered the cargo consigned to those ports. From Shanghai the steamer was bound by the terms of the charter to proceed direct to Yokohama, and there deliver the remainder of her cargo. Instead of so doing, the master of the steamer, without authority from the charterers, took on board at Shanghai a quantity of cotton to be transported to the port of Kio, a port within the terms of the charter. The freight on this cotton was collected by the ship's agent and turned over to the shipowner. From Kio the ship proceeded to Yokohama, and there delivered the remainder of the cargo that had been shipped in New York for that port. This deviation from the voyage described in the charter party caused a delay in reaching Yokohama of some two or three days. So far as appears, however, none of the consignees of the cargo delivered in Yokohama made any complaint of the delay to Kio, or any demand upon the charterer by reason thereof. And now the charterer files his libel against the steamship seeking to recover the amount of the freight received by the shipowner for the transportation of the cotton from Shanghai to Kio, and also damages for deviation.

In regard to the claim for the freight earned by the ship in transporting cotton from Shanghai to Kio, the contention of the claimant is that the charter party should be interpreted to mean that the charterers were to have the right to ship in New York a full cargo, for delivery at the ports of Aden, Amoy, Shanghai and Yokohama, but when once the full space of the vessel had been occupied by him, the right to furnish further cargo was exhausted. That the shipowner, by virtue of his possession and control of the ship, had the right to the space in the ship left empty by the delivery of the cargo at Aden, Amoy and Shanghai, and consequently were entitled to transport on the ship's account the cotton transported from Shanghai to Kio.

To this view of the effect of the charter party I cannot assent. As I read the charter party, it gives the charterer the right to have the ship perform the voyage from New York to Aden, then to the port of Amoy, then to Shanghai, and then to Yokohama, or to any of them, either full or with sufficient cargo for ballast, shipped by the libellant or his shippers, and not otherwise, and it gave the shipowner no right to take on cargo on the ship's account at any port during the voyage. The loading of the ship on ship's account at Shanghai increased the weight of the ship during the rest of the voyage, and by so much retarded her progress. It might also well be that a shipment of cargo on the ship's account from Shanghai to Kio would have an important effect upon the ventures of those merchants who by agreement with the libellant shipped goods in New York for Yokohama, under a charter which gave the whole ship to the charterer. Authority for shipment of cargo on ship's account should therefore be found plainly set forth in the charter party. No such authority is stated in the charter party, and in my opinion such authority cannot be implied from the fact that the possession and control of the ship remained in the shipowner. The possession and control of the ship by the owner during the voyage was for the sole purpose of the ship's navigation during the voyage. Certainly no authority to proceed to Kio, a port not included in the voyage described in the charter, is to be found in the charter party.

In my judgment, therefore, the shipment of cotton in Shanghai for Kio, on ship's account, was a breach of the charter party. But as it appears that the ship proceeded from Kio to Yokohama, and there delivered in good order the cargo shipped in New York under the charter party for the port of Yokohama, and in view of the terms of the charter party, it seems to me that the charterer is entitled to adopt the act of the shipowner in taking in cargo at Shanghai for Kio, and to recover the freight earned by the ship for the transportation of that cargo; or, at his option, to treat the transaction as a breach of the charter party and hold the ship for the damages caused thereby. I do not see how the charterer can be entitled to the freight earned by the breach of the charter party, and also to damages for such breach.

It is said that if the freight collected at Kio and paid over to the shipowner belongs to the charterer, the libellant's claim is against the shipowner for money he had not received and is not within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. But the service performed in earning the freight was a maritime service, and the duties of the respective parties arise out of and are fixed by the terms of a charter party of the ship, and the ship was the instrument used in performing the service. Under such circumstances it is my opinion that a maritime lien in favor of the charterer attached to the ship for the amount of the freight earned by the steamship by transporting the cotton from Shanghai to Kio, and withheld from the charterer by the shipowner.

The drift of the libellant's argument leads me to suppose that if compelled to elect, the libellant will elect to recover the freight earned by the ship, and a decree for the libellant for that amount will therefore be entered, unless the libellant gives notice of election to receive the damages instead, in which case a reference will be had to ascertain the amount of such damages. The parties will doubtless agree as to the amount of the freight collected.

THE WILD CAT COLUMN.

They now call it the Land Boom-erang.
Mt. Morgan, last year, treated 163,000 tons stone for 119,800oz. of gold.

Queensland has turned out nine and a quarter million ozs. of gold, valued at 32 millions.

In one of the largest banks in Sydney there are 25 adult clerks with salaries under £3 per week.

"Shall I put my money into land or into stocks?" Principal without interest or interest without principal.

At Coolgardie, a rich reef has been discovered in a publican's backyard. But even it is nothing to the reef which was found in his front bar.

One would imagine from reading the printed reports of Sydney stock-brokers that they did a heap of mining business weekly. Cheap talk and free advice.

The V.D.L. shareholders, by the way, have lost all their capital, and the success of the lottery, which is a fair gamble duly authorized by Parliament, will simply mean that they will be able to pay their debts without making a call.

As a consequence of the style in which Sydney banks are treating small manufacturers and other "little" employers of labour, before the first quarter of 94 expires a large number of these will be themselves back in the ranks of labour.

Queensland gold yield for '93: 600,327 oz., a decrease of 15,231 oz. on '92. Principal yields—Charter Towers, 216,364 oz.; Rockhampton, 114,039 oz.; Gympie, 78,966 oz.; Croydon, 77,102 oz.; Etheridge, 29,236 oz.; Ravenswood, 9,286 oz.

The Sydney and Port Macquarie Co., which holds 800 acres of coal area under Sydney Harbour, wants to float itself in London for £300,000. Rumoured that a well-known merchant, now on his way to England, will take a hand in the scheme.

Another mountain of gold is vaguely reported—from Macfarland. A gun-digger, struck with the curious formation of Parahad mountain, at Whangarei, dug up at random three samples of the hill and sent them for assay. Alleged results, 60 oz. per ton. Usual syndicate incubating.

Rumoured that a large Melbourne firm will "go" during the current month, taking a bank with it. Rumour sometimes makes a mistake, however. Also it is difficult to believe that any Small-business bank can go further than most of them have gone already. By the way, there have of late been some big unpublished compositions in Sydney.

There is something picturesque about the Metropolitan's style of banking, though it isn't much more picturesque than the ordinary boom-bank system. Taking them all round, the accounts seem to have been kept by a Chinese man writing with his foot dipped in tar, and the "securities" appear to have been mostly preserved in the coal-scuttle and Gehad, the auditor, apparently took things pretty much for granted.

when times grew better they would rise to renewed wealth and become valuable customers once more.

Therefore the banks are seemingly going to sell the balance of the whited sepulchres for what they will fetch, and get rid of them. Taking them all round, they won't fetch much.

A large Australian institution has decided that in future the managing director is to get £1000 per annum; the directors—four of them—£125 each; the manager, £500; and the auditors each £100 a year. How much supervision is likely to be got for ten guineas, and how much a £1000 auditor is likely to find out about the possible irregularities of a £1000 manager, are considerations which the liquidation comes along. When £2000 worth of bonds wants to be watched by only £21 worth of auditor it suggests several hundred things which need not be further alluded to.

The boom will come again, no doubt, but when it does there will be a new generation of boomers, and the present crowd will mostly be old and greasy and unshaven and nasally caruncled, and their frowny hair will stick up through their shattered hats, and they will breathe a stealer at the free-lunch counter while they swap lies about their vanished greatness. A few indomitable spirits will come to the front a second time, and first back with all their former affability, but as a general rule, each boom brings a new crowd to the front, and the old crowd mostly takes refuge in the S up Kitchen.

A State note-issue without a State Bank is a hazardous device. The Queensland system is simply a scheme whereby any bank which is in difficulties can stave off trouble by getting the loan from the State of paper money, for the redemption of which the State is responsible. And all the security the State possesses is the right to call for repayment of the loan by four instalments. Which is not so very much more solid than the right to call on Jaber Balfour to come back from Argentina and settle up with his victims; or to call on spirits to arise out of the vasty deep, or the blessed privilege of calling on bread to drop from heaven, or of going out into a lonely place and calling generally.

In case of a panic, the whole £100,000 in notes might arrive at the Treasury with a demand for gold. Therefore, the State would have to find £100,000 in gold at an instant's notice, whereas it had only received one-fourth of the amount, the other three-fourths being owed to it by the bank without any security. And though the State has to pay the whole amount on the instant, it can only call on the bank to pay in four instalments extending over nine months.

The New Oriental Bank, which was supposed to have burst on suddenly upon principles and to be an instance of purely unscrupulous misfortune, appears to be pretty much like any other insolent bank. There is talk now of £1,000,000 which was advanced to rotten companies, and there were personal loans of a wild kind on shady securities—one set of influential people, for instance, borrowed £20,000, part of which, at least, is among the bad debts. As there was much riotous investment in gorgeous premises and much opening of unprofitable branches out of a mad desire to get ahead of some other bank. The report of this eminent British institution begins to read just like that of an Australian land boom bank in liquidation, when Simpson is overhauling the accounts.

The lamentable Metropolitan Bank (Melbourne) is now expected to produce just about 6d. in the £ for its creditors—perhaps a trifle less. This is the awful institution which, a month ago, some sanguine boomers wanted to reconstruct on the ground that it was too valuable a bank to be wasted. The shareholders, of course, get nothing. The busted Metropolitan Bank and the equally busted Metropolitan Building Society were tangled up together in an uncharitable fashion, and the bank premises—valued estimated to be worth £133,000—which were taken over from the Building Society of a man alleged, never legally transferred at all, because the board, or somebody, quite forgot to attend to the matter. Therefore, the shareholders of the Society are now thinking of selling the building and throwing the "bank" into the street without compensation. Alto, the bottom has utterly fallen out of £500,000 of other Metropolitan "assets," and the whole whole affair seems to be so hollow as to be hardly worth liquidating.

Therefore, the situation stands thus. A bank doing a large business, and in straitened circumstances, might lodge £500,000 in gold at the Treasury and get £2,000,000 in State notes, which are quite as serviceable. It credits the Government with £1,500,000 as a deposit, and, consequently, gets a loan of this amount on no security, but that makes no difference; its position is not improved. If there is no national panic and no extensive demand for gold at the Treasury, it keeps on owing the deposit and floating new loans on a similar basis as long as the bank lasts. And as no bank need break so long as it can find a sovereign to leave with the Treasury and get £4 in notes in exchange, it follows that a bank may go on getting more and more dry-rotted through a long course of years while showing no outward signs of decay, and when the smash does come will be a surprise that nothing remains, and that all the millions owing to the Government are gone with the rest.

Queensland's great experiment of making the note-issue a State monopoly and abolishing the paper money of the banks is working well up to date. How long it will work is a matter of serious doubt. The Queensland Free Man Government, with its constitutional inability to go straight, went crooked on this occasion, as usual. The whole financial policy of the Government, no matter what device track it may take, has always the same goal—the interests of the Q.N. Bank; and even the seemingly progressive idea of making the currency a State monopoly instead of a private monopoly gets there just the same. The Queensland notes are legal tender throughout the country, and can be exchanged for gold at the Treasury, where a 25 per cent. reserve is kept in sovereigns. But the notes are circulated on a lawful and wonderful plan. When any bank wants £100,000 worth of paper it deposits £25,000 in sovereigns with the Government and gets it. The remaining £75,000 is credited to the Government as a deposit on which a nominal rate of interest is paid.

The Bank of Van Diemen's Land lottery is at last fairly under way. The rules of the old bank are to be disposed of in £100,000 shares of £1 each. There are over 370 prizes, the first one being a Hobart city property valued at £36,000. The second prize is a first-class city hotel (Hadley's "Orient") of between 60 and 70 apartments, value £21,000. Then follow one of £12,000 value; one of £10,000; one of £5,000; two valued at £2,000 each, and so on down to a humble minimum of £100. The prizes are all put in at a reasonable valuation, and the lottery is managed (on behalf of the liquidators of the V.D.L. Bank) by Geo. Adams, the well-known "Tattersall," whose name is sufficient guarantee for the solid integrity of the whole proceedings. The properties are all situated in Tasmania—a pleasant place where any man can put in his declining years with satisfaction, and the winner of any one of the 16 or 20 big prizes can't do better than settle down on his property, and let the restful, sleepy atmosphere of Van Diemen's Land soak into his soul, and sink into a state of unutterable rest.—Sydney Bulletin.

How to gain Flesh and Strength.—Take after each meal about a tablespoonful of Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It is almost as palatable as milk and easily digested. The rapidly with which delicate children and sickly people suffering from weakness and wasting disease improve, and thrive upon this it is truly marvellous. As a remedy for Consumption and Throat Affections and Bronchitis it is unequalled by any other preparation in the world. Any Chemist can supply it.—A. S. Watson & Co.
